

The government should not have the right to read any of my correspondence, electronic or other, unless there is cause to show that it is necessary. Further, the government should not even have the ABILITY to do so unless they have shown that there is cause to courts and the company that controls the correspondence. It should not be 'easy' for the government to access its citizens personal data. Citizens are innocent until proven guilty and should be treated as such. I will not give up my rights for a very small amount of added security, especially since I don't trust the government to make decisions in secret.
